OUR APPROACH

Private security has been around practically since the beginning of civilization. Crime prevention and law enforcement were a community responsibility. Community involvement in apprehending criminals gave birth to the posse that we recall from the days of the Old era and is recognizable today when an individual makes a "citizen's arrest." "In ancient Greece, a system of protection was developed to protect the monarchy as well as for the protection of highways leading into the cities. So as to Wolf Security identifies its creation to help and protect the citizens apart from the police protection available by the state of law, it is to provide protection at the time of need when an individual at local level requires to be protected with the means of private security.

Security Planning

Our Security Plan is not only shows how to develop, implement a Human Safety and Security Program, it also shows how to evaluate and improve it. In order to work with Human Safety and Security Plan, few simple concepts and definitions are needed to be understood.

Security Threat. A security threat is a potential hazard.

Where a threat does not actually exist as a real event or object. It's only a potential danger. It exists as an idea, not as an actual event or object.

Security Hazard When a security threat turns into reality, it becomes a hazard. When a security threat is actualized or becomes real.

Security Disaster. When people actually come into direct contact with a hazard, they have got a real security disaster. They have got a situation in which they can have serious misery and suffering.
